

Your Creative Space...

When I first began to paint, like many others, I did not have a designated area in my house that allowed me to leave my palette and paints out so I could pick my brush up any time I wanted to. As time passed, I realized that I was often reluctant to dig out the palette and paints knowing that I would have to pack them up and put them away again. It seemed like a chore! Finding creative space, for me, suddenly became a NEED, not just a WANT.

Your painting space does not have to be a big space. Walk through your house and "feel" which room would be the most comfortable room for you to create in. Then claim a small corner of it as "yours" and as "off limits". I found that I don't need much room to create a successful painting. My present studio is 6' x 12' - not very much room to turn around in.

But it's MINE.

And that's what counts.
